ON THE RACK ALL OF THIS MORNING

Helter Spent Much of the Time Denying Things.

THE CONFESSION BROUGHT OUT

Judge Eason Allowed the Attorneys For the Defense to See the Original Document—Helter Was Going to "Thump" Roche.

The first week of the Helter-Roche trial is at an end, court having closed at noon until Monday morning. The plaintiff is still hard at it and George W. Helter was on the stand when the day's proceedings ended. He had been subjected to a fire of questions in cross examination, and had spent the greater part of the time in denial. The sensations of the morning were the order of Judge Eason for the plaintiff to produce Mrs. Helter's confession, the statement of Helter that he had intercepted a letter from Roche to his wife and she had taken it, and his declaration that he had eaten dinner at a picnic in Dresden with Bessie Kistler two years ago. He said he visited Roche's house with the intention of "thumping" him.

THOSE LETTERS

Helter Related His Experience With Unsigned Communications.

In direct examination Friday afternoon Helter said:

"When I called on Roche he said nothing of his future care of my business. I returned June 29."

"I had heard no intimation of the conduct between Mrs. Helter and Roche. I heard it about the middle of July. When I came back in June I stayed three days and stayed at our home. I saw Roche in front of Brendel's shoe store. He said he heard I was going to take my wife west. I said yes. He said he would give her the office work and it would be cheaper for her to stay here. I said the work was no compensation for the loss of her company, and I would take her with me. He asked me to think it over, and I said I would. When I left she was on Chestnut street."

Judge Hunter sketched a plat of the Cherry street residence and its surroundings and it was explained to Helter by Mr. Merrell. Then Judge Hunter had Helter tell what he knew of it from memory. He also described the house, the porch, doors, windows and cellar door, "the kind we used to slide on," Judge Hunter suggested. Helter located the corn, coalhouse, and explained the absence of fences. He said the entrance from the cellar was into the diningroom.

"When I left here July 3 I went to Indianapolis. About July 13 I received an anonymous letter at Bloomington about my wife. It was postmarked at Coshocton. I destroyed the letter. I received another in August. It was postmarked Coshocton and sent to Gallion, and I got it at Hannibal, Mo. No names were signed to them. I received a telegram one night about 11 o'clock at Hannibal. I can give the substance of the first letter, and can quote the second verbatim. The first letter gave me the information that Judge Roche and my wife were not conducting themselves right. The second letter spoke of criminal relations. The telegram said Judge Roche and my wife were together at that hour."

Captain James objected, and the answer was stricken out.

"I wrote to my wife and told her what I had received," said the witness, and Captain James objected, and the answer was stricken out.

"When I got the second letter I wrote to my wife and told her of it. I became ill at Hannibal the second week in August, a week after I got the letter. When I got the telegram I cried about it. I was too sick to write. After I wrote the first letter I got one from my wife. I destroyed it. A long argument as to whether the contents of the letter could be admitted followed. The big law books were brought out, the attorneys measured strength while the crowd sizzled in the awful temperature of the blistering afternoon. Judge Eason sustained the objection, but said he would decide the matter Saturday morning.

The question of allowing the jury to go home Saturday morning was raised and Judge Eason said court would continue until noon unless some good reason for adjournment was given.

"The letter from my wife allayed my suspicions," said Helter. "I got back here October 5 or 6. I saw Roche the next day. I had those communications with me. I saw him at his office. I went to the door. He was writing for a woman. He saw me and said, 'Let's go out on the steps.' I said he had betrayed the confidence I reposed in him and showed him the letters and one that had been sent to my address here. I don't like to use his language. He said these letters were written by that."

DeHart: that he was doing everything to ruin him. He read the letters. The first letter said my wife and Roche were not conducting themselves right or they were lied on." He then gave the contents of the next letter and telegram. "I destroyed the letter that was here for me. It said Mr. Roche and has been constantly calling on your wife on Cherry street. Each seemed to be from a different party."

"Roche assured me it was a mistake and they were trying to ruin him. He convinced me all was right. I told him I had conveyed the contents of these letters to my wife. He asked me how she took it, denied it and protected him.

"I saw Roche the next morning in front of the Commercial bank and he showed me a letter he had received. The contents were the same."

"I object," said Mr. Adams. "The letter hasn't been accounted for," said the court.

"Have you the letter?" asked Judge Hunter of the defense.

"You haven't served notice on us," said Mr. Adams. Judge Hunter gave it up and the witness proceeded.

"I asked Roche to let me have it. He said he would as soon as he had showed it to Mr. Meek. That is the last I saw or heard of it."

"He said the letter he had accounted for the letters I had received. I went from here to Indiana. I stayed with my wife but didn't get along pleasantly with her. We talked on this subject. I came back the Saturday before the election. I talked to Mrs. Henselman when I returned. She told me of the relations between Roche and my wife. I went to see Roche, and talked to him about the matter."

After recess Helter continued his testimony. He said:

"I received some other information on the subject and I went to Judge Roche's office. He was alone. I told him the people had no hesitancy in telling me of you and Mrs. Helter. I told him I had been told he had been seen going into my house through the back door and the cellarway. He said 'I'll prove to you that is not so.' He said he would prove he was incapable of sustaining illicit relations with a woman. He asked me if he could go to my mother's home and have a conference with me and Mrs. Helter. I told him he could not go. I went home to my father's house alone. When I returned I met Mr. Roche on the street. He said, 'If you will take your wife and go west and stop your investigations, I will appoint you county examiner.' I told him he need not mind doing it as I would not stop the investigation until I got to the bottom of it. If I find you innocent, I said, 'I will get down on my knees and beg your pardon but if I find you guilty I will prosecute you to the extent of the law.'"

"Mrs. Helter went west. We stopped in Bloomington, Ill. She came home because her sister wrote her that her mother was very ill. She wrote to me after she came back. This was in January 1901. I worked in Missouri and returned to Bloomington, Ill. I then came to Indianapolis and my wife met me there. We went to Bloomington then and I furnished two rooms and bought her a piano. I received a letter from Mr. Roche March 13, 1901. Shortly after we went to Bloomington.

At this point Mr. Merrell had Mr. Helter sign two papers one of which was handed to Judge Roche and he gave it to his attorneys.

Continuing Helter said: "I received another communication from Mr. Roche. It was not addressed to me. It was addressed to Mrs. Helter. I could not find it when it came east. He never wrote me about the school examiner business."

"Look at that," said Judge Hunter. "Do you know the handwriting of Mr. Roche?"

"Yes sir, that is his letter."

Judge Hunter started to read it and Captain James objected and Judge Eason asked to see the letter. It was read by order of Judge Eason.

It contained information about a business matter between Mr. Helter and Mr. Roche. It also mentioned another letter that Roche had written to Helter and had been returned.

Continuing the story: "Mrs. Helter stayed with me about a month and returned because her mother was worse. I came back to Coshocton and met Mrs. Helter. We had a conversation. Mrs. Helter went to look after some business and I went to dinner. I talked to Mr. Roche in the afternoon. I told him I received a letter from him and one from my wife. I told him he need not make his appointment of county examiner. He said he wanted to keep me on the board with whom he would have influence so he could help people in the examination whose parents had helped him in the campaign.

"This was the first Saturday in April. Mrs. Helter and I went to her folks at Port Washington that evening and came back about Tuesday or Wednesday. I then went to Otsego to do legal work for my employers. I returned to Coshocton and talked to Mr. Lemley. I then went to see the doctor who attended my wife when she was sick. I received no information from him and then I talked to my wife.

"We then went to see Roche. I went to his office. He was alone. I told Mr. Roche here is the wife whom he had seduced and had been denying it all summer. He put his head on his arm and pretended to cry but he did not cry. He said there must be some mistake. I said there was none and Mrs. Helter said, 'What I have told you is the truth.' That was all that was said there on that subject. Mr. Roche invited us back at another time and said he would talk to us about it. I told him I would never enter his office again. I became satisfied Mr. Roche and Mrs. Helter had sustained criminal relation on the Saturday before Mrs. Helter made the written confession."

Captain James wanted the written confession produced and Judge Eason said he thought an order ought to be asked for requesting its production. Judge Hunter said they would offer it as evidence. Captain James said he would not admit it was evidence. Judge Eason said the matter would be decided in the morning. Captain James objected to this, and Judge Eason asked Mr. James if he thought the court could order it produced upon his request. He replied that he did in the face of the facts that have transpired here. Judge Eason said he thought the defendants had a right to the documents, and Captain James made a motion that the court order its production. The motion was submitted in writing.

The examination continued: "Mrs. Helter and I continued together two days after that interview with Judge Roche. The written document had not then been signed. I never talked with Judge Roche since. There was nothing said about settling. There was nothing said about $5,000 or $500 or about going west. I did not send my wife home. Mrs. Helter and I have never spoken since we were in Nicholas' office together. There was no arrangement between myself and Mrs. Helter about this suit."

Captain James here read the motion asking for an order for the production of the written confession. Judge Hunter said they wanted to be heard on the motion.

"The application will be heard in the morning," said Judge Eason.

Cross examination was conducted by Cap. James. Mr. Helter said: "I am 35 years old. I was admitted to the bar in Chicago last February. I have not been admitted in Ohio. I was not very well acquainted with chattel mortgages and promissory notes when I left Coshocton. I did not have much use for a lawyer after I left Coshocton, but my wife did. It was no material difference to me how Mrs. Helter collected notes so she got the money for them. I had about half a dozen chattel mortgages and 60 or 70 notes when I left. I did not save the letters because I thought Mr. Roche and Mrs. Helter had been wronged and I did not think it was necessary to preserve them. I heard my wife testify that all of her letters were destroyed. All of mine have been destroyed. I did not know the letters were not true. I had confidence in Mr. Roche and so destroyed the anonymous letters. I said on direct examination that I did not make up my mind that they were guilty until she made the written confession. I received three anonymous letters and the telegram and came and confronted Roche and Mrs. Helter with them. I was not fully satisfied but was willing to give them the benefit of the doubt. Mrs. Helter had a secret talk with Judge Roche at Harris' tailor shop. I believe I did state to the jury that it was a secret conversation. It did not arouse my suspicions. I saw them and they saw me. I called it secret because I did not hear it. I did not intend that statement to influence the jury and make them think Judge Roche was following up the advantage I had heard he had gained over Mrs. Helter."

The usual caution was given to the jury and court adjourned until Saturday morning.

SATURDAY MORNING

The End of the Week Finds Helter Under Fire.

Judge Eason opened court by hearing what Mr. Merrell had to say against the motion of the defense to introduce Mrs. Helter's confession. Judge Eason held it was proper to have the document produced, and Judge Hunter passed up a copy of the confession to the court. Captain James and Mr. Adams demanded the original and it came out of Attorney Wheeler's pocket. It went immediately into the hands of Attorney Adams who with Judge Roche read it carefully.

Judge Eason also decided the question of admitting the letters that passed between Helter and his wife, saying they were admissible.

Captain James continued the cross examination of Helter who used a palmleaf fan with a languor that bespoke extreme heat.

"I worried much about this matter. I was not indifferent about it. I talked to people around the town about it. I don't think I was telling this story to everyone who would listen. I did not state that I wouldn't have cared so much about it if Roche hadn't treated me so badly. I talked with Mr. Maston, of The Age about it but I don't remember that I said I did not know what I would do about it. I didn't say 'I wouldn't have cared if he hadn't treated me so'—mean about it."

"I know W. H. McCabe, of the Standard. I never talked to him since this happened. I talked to Cotton and not to McCabe."

"I don't think I was at Robinson's show. We came down on the morning train to attend the show but the unpleasantness of the weather prevented us from going. I didn't know there was anything wrong then. I don't know that it was Robinson's show. It was some show. We came. I think, from my home. It was after I received the anonymous letters and after Mr. Roche and my wife had convinced me there was nothing wrong. Doctor Frew told me his oath of office would not permit him to tell me what was wrong with my wife. That and her verbal confession convinced me. I thought there was a possibility of Mr. Roche being lied upon. I gave them the benefit of the doubt."

"The day we came to the circus we went to Barringer's house. We stayed there while we were in Coshocton. I don't know how long it was. I have no idea."

"What's become of your memory?" "I have it with me. I was often called out of town on business. We did not come down the Saturday before the circus."

Helter could not remember dates, and a calendar was produced and explained to him by Captain James, the captain asking him if he did not come here May 5 and return to his home May 11, but he was not certain. His memory also failed him as to the next week. He explained that he was out on business, but went back home the 18th, and returned Monday, the 20th, the day he brought suit.

"I went to Ulrichsville the evening of the 18th, and drove home with my sister. On the 18th my wife went with me to the attorneys' office. I carried her grip to the depot and forever bid her goodbye. I don't know who was present at that time. It is not true I have been driving around with her. I am here to tell the truth although that social leper did destroy my home. 'Didn't you offer a five dollar bill to a witness last night?'"

"No sir. I hope God to strike me dead if I did." Helter's voice shook. "I never lived with my wife after she made her verbal confession. I think it was three days before her written confession. I don't remember when I was in Roche's office with my wife. The verbal confession was made at Barringer's. I don't remember the day. We went to Roche's office two hours afterward. I can't give you any idea as to the date."

"Wasn't you at Roche's residence the Monday after she made the confession?"

"I was there but I don't remember the date."

"What is the matter with your memory? Is there anything wrong with you?"

"No sir. I don't remember when I went to Schott's office with Roche, but I was there at night. It was not late. It was after I had been with my wife to see Judge Roche at the courthouse. I don't know whether it was the 11th. I have no idea when it was. I didn't find Roche at his residence. I then went to the front of Ransom's dry goods store. He came by and motioned for me to follow him."

"I was hunting him. I had two means of redress in this matter. I went to his house to thump the life out of him. I went up town and was convinced the better way was to go in to court and let the law settle it. In Schott's office he told me we were in to the matter and if it was made public it would ruin him."

"Isn't it a fact, Roche drove you out of the office?"

"No. He couldn't drive anyone but a woman. I didn't know my wife went to his office and tried to settle for $500. She told me about it. I told her to shut her mouth and stay away from there. No I never said to Roche I would settle for $5,000. Then with tears and a sob he said twenty-five hundred thousand dollars wouldn't settle it."

"I did talk with Pomerene & Pomerene about settling this case, but $500 was not mentioned."

Judge Hunter objected to this testimony and asked the witness if he was in that office consulting them as his attorney. He said yes. Judge Eason said the witness did not have to divulge what passed between him and the attorneys in question if he was there consulting them as his attorneys.

"I was at Otsego when my wife went to see Roche. I don't know whether she went to see him while I was in Otsego. I had no knowledge that my wife went to Roche regarding settlement."

"I know what Roche told me about my wife being employed in his office. I told him we would consider it. I said I wouldn't be with our company for four or five times what she would make out of it. I took it under consideration because Roche so insisted. It was some time in October, 1900. I don't know what I meant when I said I would consider it. I knew I wouldn't allow her to do it. I was not suspicious of Roche. Yes, this was after I received that telegram and those anonymous letters."

Recess was announced at this hour and when Judge Eason rapped for order Helter continued:

"When I came back in November I received other information concerning Roche and my wife but I didn't think anything was wrong. I took Roche's word. I had no suspicion when he showed me everything was right. I had no suspicion against my wife. We had never had an unpleasant word in our home until we went west. There my wife became very indignant when we discussed the stories about herself and Roche. I treated her as respectfully as ever, but once she said if I wanted to leave her I should do it now when she was young and she knew what she could do. Her affection did not seem as strong for me as before. There was nothing else to mar my feelings. She was not the same woman. She was indifferent and her attentions seemed to be elsewhere. She didn't treat me as pleasantly and as lovingly as before. I could tell it by her actions. We furnished rooms at Bloomington and settled down to live there as our home. I felt an interest in it and as far as I know she did. Nothing was wrong then. That was the latter part of February, 1901. I went out on business and she stayed there to look after the home. Her sister wrote her that her mother was ill and she came back."

"One time when I returned before she expected me I got a letter from Roche for her. I went down to the house and asked her if she had written to Roche, and she said no. I didn't give her the letter. I put it in my trunk, but I don't know where it is. I think she got it. My trunk was under lock and key. She didn't know I had the letter. I don't know she took the letter. I didn't destroy it. I did destroy the other letters because I didn't think it was necessary to keep them."

"Why didn't you show her that letter?"

"I have no reason to give."

"Mrs. Helter was in Nicholas' office the Saturday before this suit was brought. I was there. She understood why she was making the statement. She did not know the

THREE DIVORCE SUITS.

Coshocton People Are Tired of Living With Each Other.

The list of divorce petitions in probate court is steadily increasing. Three have been filed this week.

Mrs. Christian Tubbs wants a divorce from her husband, William Tubbs and charges habitual drunkenness and cruelty as the grounds for divorce. Mrs. Tubbs says she is sole owner of the Farmer's hotel business and that her husband collects money from the boarders and buys liquor with it. She also charges that he has been abusive and threatened her life. Divorce and custody of the children are asked. She also wants him restrained from interfering with her control of the hotel business. They were married in 1870.

Mrs. Sadie Schoonover asks divorce from Daniel Schoonover because, she says, he was cruel to her and failed to provide a house to live in or the necessities of life.

They were married in 1899 and have no children. Divorce and restoration to maiden name of Cuning are asked. Mrs. Mary Christopher charges that her husband, Irvin Christopher abandoned her about two months after their marriage in May 1901. For this she wants a divorce and restoration to her maiden name, Moore.

COOPER'S GOOD WORK.

The Stenographer Catches Every Word of What is Going on.

Charley Cooper, court stenographer of Licking county who is taking the Helter-Roche case, is frequently called upon by Judge Eason and the attorneys to settle some disputed point in the testimony by reading what has been said. His voice is not, perhaps, so musical as the sweet songs of summer birds, but it rings through the courtroom and everybody hears. Cooper is a master in his work and possesses superior skill.

SIMMERING DOWN.

Prospects That Backbone of the Hot Spell Is Broken.

Washington, July 27.—Weather bureau officials here regard the situation as somewhat improved. Temperatures officially reported ranged from 92 to 100 in the corn belt. Conditions will remain practically the same in the drouth section during Saturday and Sunday, and the weather will continue very hot with the possibility of relief from scattered thunderstorms. In the Dakotas and in Montana there was no rain of any importance, but temperatures were a little lower. There were good heavy rains in Wisconsin, lower Michigan and northern Ohio and fair rains in New York.

Friday was the most favorable to the corn belt since the existing hot wave began nearly 40 days ago. Rains, generally light in amount, fell in western Kansas, western Nebraska, southwestern Missouri, central Iowa, Arkansas and a little in Oklahoma, and prospects seem to be favorable for a continuation of more numerous showers in the same section. Sunday showers are looked for in northern Illinois and northern Indiana. Still there has been no general rain, of which the crops stand so much in need, and there's no immediate prospect of any.

Heat Record of St. Louis.

St. Louis, July 27.—From all indications St. Louis has witnessed the beginning of the end of the present spell of hot weather. The maximum temperature was 97 degrees and 16 deaths from heat were reported for the 24 hours ending at 11 p. m. The story of the hot spell in St. Louis is told in the following few lines: Duration, 23 days; deaths, 215; prostrations, estimated at 1,000; last day of rain covering the entire city of St. Louis, July 3; highest temperature recorded in St. Louis, 107.1.

Deaths From Heat.

Washington, July 27.—Among the deaths due to heat Friday reported from various cities are the following: At Chicago 4, Springfield, Ill., 2, Kansas City 1, Cincinnati 2, Louisville 7.

Prayed For Rain.

Omaha, July 27.—Acting on the recent proclamation of Governor Savage, nearly all the churches of Omaha held meetings Friday, praying for rain.

Reindeer For Alaska.

Washington, July 27.—A cablegram was received at the interior department from Lieutenant Berthoff, who was sent to Siberia to purchase reindeer for use in Alaska, saying that he has arrived at Vladivostok and has purchased 500 deer for 13 roubles each, with the prospect of securing 100 more, and 1,000 next summer. Lieutenant Berthoff asks for money to charter a steamer to Port Clarence. It is hoped that the steamer can reach Port Clarence by the last of August. The price of the deer is about $6.70 in American money.

Earthquake in the Desert.

Salt Lake City, July 27.—A section 75 miles wide through the Nevada desert, from Death as far west as Carlin, experienced a series of heavy earthquakes shocks at 10 p. m. Friday. The vibrations generally were from north to south, and at one or two points lasted for fully five seconds. At Elko, Nev., the shock was unusually severe. The high school building, a big new brick edifice, was badly cracked by the violence of the vibrations, and other buildings were slightly damaged. The earthquake was followed by heavy rain.

Argument With Pistols.

Clarksville, Tenn., July 27.—A sensational shooting affray occurred in the chancery courtroom in which four members of the bar, William Daniel, Sr., and Jr., and F. G. and George Gilbert took part. The trouble arose over a lawsuit in which young Daniel and F. G. Gilbert were opposing counsel. The elder Daniel was shot in the neck. William Daniel, Jr., received a scalp wound and was shot in the left arm near the shoulder. F. G. Gilbert was shot in the left arm and in the right shoulder. There were 15 shots exchanged.

THE ENTIRE MATTER.

Every Act of Admiral Schley Will Be Weighed.

COURT TO REPORT ITS CONCLUSIONS.

All Important Facts With the Opinion and Recommendations of the Court to Be Submitted to the Navy Department—Spanish Officers May Be Called as Witnesses.

Washington, July 27.—Judge Advocate Lemley has forwarded to Admiral Dewey and Rear Admirals Kimberley and Benham (retired), as members of the court of inquiry, and to Rear Admiral Schley, the precept prepared by the navy department to indicate the matters to be investigated. While it directs that "the entire matter" of Admiral Schley's conduct during the operations in West Indian waters shall be investigated, making use of the very words employed by Admiral Schley in his letter to Secretary Long, it also selects certain distinctive acts of the rear admiral concerning the facts and propriety of which it calls for particular investigation. These points cover briefly Admiral Schley's alleged delay with the flying squadron at Cienfuegos, his progress toward Santiago after leaving Cienfuegos, the retrograde movement toward Key West, the effectiveness of the bombardment of the Spanish fleet at the ranges used in the reconnaissance of May 31, the state of the coal supply on various ships when he telegraphed the department that he would return to Key West, the loop of the Brooklyn at Santiago, the accuracy of his reports and matters relating to the controversy between him and Commander Hodgson over the alleged colloquy, which is said to have taken place aboard the Brooklyn when the loop was made during the naval engagement off Santiago. With the exception of the last two counts the others practically sum up the criticisms of Admiral Schley's conduct made by Secretary Long to the senate, which the secretary characterized as Schley's "reprehensible conduct."

No word has been received from Admiral Kimberley, who, it was reported, had written to the department saying that his health made it inadvisable for him to attempt to serve on the court. He will not be officially notified of his selection as a member of the court until he receives the precept which was mailed him. A copy of the precept was also sent to Admiral Dewey and Rear Admiral Benham, members of the court, and to Rear Admiral Schley. One of the important points in the precept is the direction to the court to report in its conclusions "all the pertinent facts which it may deem to be established, together with its opinion and recommendations in the premises." Judge Advocate Gen. Lemley, of the court, will now proceed with the preparation of the case. He will examine all documents and prepare a list of witnesses. The court probably will sit several months, more than likely until after congress convenes. Judge Lemley has not yet decided whom the witnesses before the court shall be. They may be taken from the navy, from the army or from civil life, for undoubtedly some of the newspaper correspondents will be called in this case. It is even probable, in view of the recently published interview of Captain Eulate of the Spanish navy, that he and Admiral Cervera will be called if Admiral Schley desires it. Of course the court of inquiry has no authority to compel their attendance, and it is more than doubtful whether they would respond to a summons, but the opportunity will be afforded.

Britain Behind on Trolley Lines. London, July 27.—Sir Hiram Maxim, speaking to a meeting of the Maxim Engineering company, said that electric railways were revolutionizing American city life and property values, whereas Great Britain was deplorably behind in the matter of electric traction, which had spread out populations and mitigated some of the great evils of modern cities. He declared that light electric roads were capable of 120 miles an hour, that their construction was perfectly practicable, and that their cost would be cheaper than present steam lines.

All One-Sided. Denver, July 27.—Young Corbett of Denver made Kid Broad of New York look like an amateur in their 10-round go at the coliseum, and was given the decision at the end of the bout. Corbett had no trouble in landing on Broad and put him to the mat three times during the bout. He landed an average of five blows to Broad's one, and at the finish Broad went to his corner with blood flowing from his nose and apparently very tired.

Porto Ricans Rejoice. Washington, July 27.—Secretary Hunt of Porto Rico cabled to the state department "News of the president's proclamation was received throughout Porto Rico. There was a general expression of popular gratification and many telegrams announce popular rejoicing and send messages of congratulation to the president and Governor Allen."

San Francisco, July 27.—Hamilton Blunt, formerly captain in the Forty-ninth infantry (colored), who was dismissed from the army last January, left for Washington to seek reinstatement. He asserts that he has proof that his dismissal was due to a conspiracy on the part of the other officers, who wished to conceal their own irregularities.

WIRELESS TELEGRAPHY.

Lloyd's Agency Said to Have Developed a New System.

Two new systems of wireless telegraphy, which are claimed by the inventors to be superior to that of Signor Marconi, have been developed by the Lloyd agency of England and will be tested in the presence of Commander Richardson Clover, United States naval attaché in London, says a Washington special dispatch to the Philadelphia Public Ledger. Apparently satisfied with the Marconi system, the British government is negotiating for 50 additional sets of instruments, which will be installed on board the larger ships of its channel, Mediterranean and Asiatic squadrons. Developments made by Marconi and other inventors in the field of wireless telegraphy convince officials of the navy department that by the end of the present year a system can be purchased by the navy which will give entire satisfaction. Lloyd's agency has offered to supply the American navy with its instruments at a much smaller cost than fixed by Marconi. The Lloyds, according to Commander Clover, in an official report to the navy department, claim that they were able to communicate 195 miles by means of their system. The greatest distance covered by a message sent by the Marconi system is 155 miles. No details of the two systems perfected by the Lloyds have been furnished the navy department by Commander Clover, and it is unlikely that he will be supplied with information until after the proposed test. It is believed at the navy department that the principles established by Marconi are the basis for the new systems being exploited.

PINGREE'S LAST TASK.

Purpose of His Visit to Europe and South Africa.

In an interview in New York the other afternoon with a correspondent of the Detroit Journal Colonel Eli R. Sutton of Detroit, who was the traveling companion of ex-Governor Pingree during his trip through South Africa and Europe, said:

"Hazen S. Pingree went to South Africa largely for the purpose of putting into practical effect three gigantic schemes for the benefit of the people of Michigan:

"First.—The reclamation of the immense pine forests in Michigan by planting trees. He went to the Bavarian Black forest to expand this idea and overworked so much that he hastened his death.

"Second.—The rotation of crops in Michigan. In pursuit of this scheme he went to Egypt, where such a system is enforced by the government.

"Third.—The transportation of every patriot Boer and his family who desired to come to the United States. He quizzed British officials on this subject, gained their approval of it and had an appointment to consult with Kruger about it which was only prevented by the governor's illness.

"It was his idea to interest some Michigan capitalists in the plan and provide lands for the Boers among the railroad systems. He thought that these capitalists could secure very low transportation rates from the seaboard to the farms, and he proposed to let the British government in some roundabout way provide the ships for the Boers' transportation from Africa to this country. A number of English officers now in South Africa and some eminent public men in England took this plan seriously and thought well of it, provided it could be carried out without the British government's aid in the matter becoming known.

"While studying the Black forest in the interest of his reforestation id Governor Pingree even secured the names of a number of keepers who were willing to emigrate to Michigan and assume care of the forests he proposed to plant."

WORLD'S BIGGEST SHIP. Giant Celtic's Charterer Tells of Her Trip de Luxe.

Frank C. Clarke, who chartered the Celtic, the world's biggest and newest ship, for a cruise in the Mediterranean, is in London. Mr. Clarke said to the New York Journal's correspondent the other night:

"Bookings for the trip are being made in gratifying numbers by wealthy and prominent people on both sides of the Atlantic. The White Star company thought when I offered to charter their latest launched leviathan that I was a joker or a gigantic bluffer. I showed we had the money and meant business, so after six days' negotiations the charter was given.

"I am paying a big price for the big ship, but everything points to a prosperous cruise. Though the Celtic carries 2,850 passengers, my list will be limited to 800. We leave New York on Feb. 8, 1902, for a 74 days' trip de luxe in the Mediterranean. Every place of real interest will be visited, and a stay of three weeks will be made in Egypt and Jaffa to enable passengers to ascend the Nile and visit the Holy Land. Passages will cost from $400 to $750.

"So far the cities of the Mediterranean have seen no great British steamers, but next winter the greatest ship in the world will fly the English flag in their harbors. When the Celtic looms up down there, German and French vessels will look small indeed. The vessel will be run like a private yacht of the most luxurious type. A party of steel magnates have chartered over $5,000 worth of cabins on the upper promenade deck, which they will have arranged in airy, roomy suits.

"The Celtic will make her maiden trip to New York on July 26. She has nine decks, is 700 feet long, 75 feet in breadth, 49 feet deep and carries a crew of 235."

COMMERCIAL BACTERIA
Revelations of the Productive Value of Microbes.
In the rapid advance of bacteriology discoveries are constantly being made which show the importance of microbes in the practical industries of everyday life. Recent investigations into the processes of bread making, brewing, tanning, wine making, vinegar making, butter making and sugar making show that changes which have long been supposed to result from chemical action are really the work of microscopic living organisms. In all these industries it is the province of bacteriologists to find out the particular microbe which should be utilized to secure the best results, and such investigations have been made and described by Mr. Samuel C. Prescott of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, to name the latest writer on the subject, have led to the founding of a new science now recognized under the name of "industrial biology."
Even in the textile manufactures microbes have been found to have their utility. As the farmer's wife, without knowing it, "ripens" her cream for churning with bacterial assistance and thus secured the characteristic butter flavor, so in the separation of the fibers of hemp, flax and jute these microorganisms have long been employed without its being suspected that such was the fact. Flax, for example, is the "bast" fiber of the flax plant, and in order to separate it for the manufacture of linen it is necessary to dissolve a gummy, resinous substance which binds the flexible fibers to those which are brittle and useless. This is done by a process known as "retting," the stems being gathered in bundles and then set in rivers or ponds where the gum, insoluble in water alone, is attacked by the bacteria which the water contains and so decomposed or fermented that the fibers can be easily parted. The waters of certain streams have thus become famous for their effect on flax, as, for instance, the water of the river Lys, in Belgium, which has evidently become planted with the particular bacteria most suitable for this particular operation.
It has been suggested that even the changes in the tobacco leaf which give a good cigar its distinguishing aroma are due to a special kind of bacteria which may be colonized and afterward "seeded" in other varieties of tobacco. This is but one of the problems of industrial biology which still await a solution and which if rightly solved would vitally affect many of the great commercial interests of the country.

Automobile House For Family Travel
A novel vehicle that recently attracted the attention of pedestrians along Washburn avenue, near Eldridge court, for two days is an automobile house belonging to George Washington of Chicago. It is a traveling van propelled by a 40 horsepower gasoline motor and is intended for a home for its owner and his wife during their wanderings about the country, says the Chicago Tribune. An old street car has been rebuilt for the body of the house, to which are added an observation and operating platform at the front end, surrounded by large windows, and a porch in the rear. The machinery is mounted on a heavy steel frame, the whole weighing about four tons. Although no great success has as yet attended Mr. Washington's efforts to navigate in the new craft, he believes that when he has put ten inch tires on it, with teeth to them to catch the ground, he can move his house at a good pace whenever he will.

BROWN HOUSE A GOLF CLUB
Home of the Famous Agitator Now Used For That Purpose.
The house where John Brown, the famous antislavery man, lived, just on the outskirts of Akron, O., is now occupied by the Porage Golf club, and the beautiful grounds surrounding it are played over every day by enthusiastic golfers, says the Kansas City Journal. The members of the club have endeavored to keep the house just as it was, when "Osawatimie" planned for the freedom of the black race within its walls. The grounds around the house have not been changed materially, and the old stone fence that was built with infinite labor by John Brown and his sons still remains as firm as ever, a tribute to the memory of the grand old man.
Aside from the tinge of romance given the place by the fact that it was once the home of one of the most remarkable figures in the history of the United States, it is noted for the fact that it is right on the old historic portage path made by the Indians many years ago in carrying their canoes from Cuyahoga to the Tuscarawas river, and the grounds surrounding the clubhouse were once used as hunting grounds by the Delaware Indians. No more beautiful or historic place in the old Western Reserve can be found than the spot where John Brown once lived, and it will always be kept in good shape in memory of him.

GREAT FIND OF RELICS.
Diver Recovers Gun Carriages Used on Schooner Royal Savage.
J. G. Falcon of Burlington, Vt., a diver, recently visited the spot where the schooner Royal Savage, commanded by General Benedict Arnold, was sunk in 1776 by the British, says the New York World. He found three gun carriages and about 30 cannon balls and shot. Two of the former will be sent to the Smithsonian institution at Washington, and the other has been given to the city of Burlington.
The relics were discovered in about 30 feet of water. The carriages are made of wood and iron, the former being now petrified. Further investigations, it is thought, may lead to finding the private papers of Benedict Arnold which were lost on the boat.
